mPDF

A font size of zero

Character and word spacing are written to the page as a per mille of the font size, so a size of nothing is a division by nothing. Each sample below holds a run set at zero between two runs that can be read, and the two halves have to meet with nothing between them.

Shaped text

Before after, with the shaper run over a size of nothing.

Justified, and spaced out to reach both margins

Justifying sets an inter-word adjustment that is a per mille of the size as well, so a zero size run has to survive being spaced out too.

hello world hello world hello world hello world hello world hello world hello world hello world hello world hello world hello world hello world hello world
hello world hello world hello world hello world hello world hello world hello world hello world hello world hello world hello world hello world hello world

A whole paragraph at no size

Nothing follows it, because a paragraph with no size takes no height.