

mPDF

Cursive joining

A letter of a cursive script takes its form from the letters either side of it, so a character read as joining on the wrong side is drawn correctly itself and misshapes its neighbour. Every sample runs right to left; read the letter on the right of each, and compare it with the two samples under it.

Syriac: Beth before Sogdian Fe

Beth, Sogdian Fe - initial Beth

A cursive Syriac Beth character, written in a dark brown color, showing a horizontal base with a small loop on the right side.

Beth, Semkath - initial Beth, the form to match

A cursive Syriac Beth character, written in a dark brown color, showing a horizontal base with a small loop on the right side.

Beth alone - isolated Beth, the form it was given

A cursive Syriac Beth character, written in a dark brown color, showing a horizontal base with a small loop on the right side.

Beth, Sogdian Fe, Beth - initial and final Beth

A cursive Syriac Beth character, written in a dark brown color, showing a horizontal base with a small loop on the right side.

Arabic: Beh before Low Alef

Beh, Low Alef - isolated Beh

A cursive Arabic Beh character, written in a dark brown color, showing a horizontal base with a small loop on the right side.

Beh alone - isolated Beh, the form to match

A cursive Arabic Beh character, written in a dark brown color, showing a horizontal base with a small loop on the right side.

Beh, Alef - initial Beh, the form it was given

A cursive Arabic Beh character, written in a dark brown color, showing a horizontal base with a small loop on the right side.