A framework's stylesheet

Written with cssMode set to standard.

Navbar

#brand against .navbar > .container a. Standard: "Brand" is yellow and bold, the id beating the child rule. Legacy: the child rule is dropped, as mPDF v7 read no child combinator, so "Brand" is yellow and "Home" and "Docs" are blue, all three underlined as links are by default.

Brand Home Docs

Card

h5.card-title against .card h5, as heavy and written later. Standard: the title is blue. Legacy: it is black, the descendant rule coming last.

.lead against article p. Standard: the lead paragraph is large and grey, a class outweighing two tags. Legacy: it is the size and colour of the paragraph after it.

Card title

A lead paragraph, set larger than the text after it.

The body text of the card.

Sidebar navigation

#sidebar a against .nav .nav-link. Standard: the links are purple and bold, an id ancestor outweighing two classes. Legacy: they are blue and bold, the rule lifted from the nearer .nav coming last.

- First link
- Second link

List group

.list-group-item.active against .list-group .list-group-item, as heavy and written later. Standard: the active item is white on blue. Legacy: it is white on light grey, the descendant rule's background coming last, so its text all but disappears.

- An item
- The active item
- Another item

Table

td.text-end against .table td, as heavy and written later. Standard: the amounts are right-aligned. Legacy: they are left-aligned, the descendant rule coming last. "Hosting", the third row counting the header, is striped grey in both.

Item	Amount
Consulting	1,200.00
Hosting	300.00
Support	150.00

Utilities and components

.muted, written after .title. Standard: "Muted title" is light grey and bold. Legacy: it is blue and bold, classes applying in alphabetical order.

Muted title